The Kendall County Historic Preservation Commission began with the passage of the Historic Preservation Ordinance in 2006. The HPC is comprised of five citizen appointees who are encouraged to have special knowledge or training in fields closely related to historic preservation:

- An attorney
- A historian or architectural historian
- An architect/engineer
- A real estate professional
- Persons with a demonstrated interest in archeology, architecture or preservation
- County Board liaison
- Staff liaison

The Historic Preservation Commission is looking for landmark nominations in Kendall County. The designation of a house or other building as historic, or as a historic landmark, means that the building has special qualities that are worthy of preservation, perhaps because it is architecturally important, was the home of an important person, was the place of an important event, or for some other reason significant to Kendall County. A landmark is a property recommended by the Historic Preservation Commission and officially designated by the County Board. We are looking for our first landmark and all landmark designations are by owner consent.
